THE CONFERENCE

For Students

Here is your chance to meet with woman professionals from the community who have found satisfying careers in science, mathematics, engineering, computing, medicine, and other non-traditional technical careers.

Students attend two workshops, each led by a professional who shares an aspect of their technical field through a hands-on activity. Workshops typically have 15 to 20 students, facilitating interaction between the presenter and students.

Presenters also share personal experiences, education and other influences that have impacted their decisions as they have developed their careers.

For Educators and Counselors

Here is your chance to attend the Santa Fe Community College course STEM 115, STEM-focused Team-based Design: Team-based activities to engage under-represented females and minorities into STEM-based careers. Attendees may receive 1 CEC credit-hour (with 6-8 hours of remaining course available online).

For other Adults

Here is your chance to find out more about academic college preparation, paying for college and keeping girls interested in science and math.

Adult participation is optional, but adults must register to attend workshops. Adults are not permitted to attend student workshops.
